PACKAGING YOUR FRIES FOR TAKEAWAY AND DELIVERY

Fry Sleeve

Many restaurants already use fry sleeves for to-go orders. Here's how to pack them in a way that delivers on both safety and the best eating experience.

Step 1

Insert napkin into sleeve all the way to the bottom.

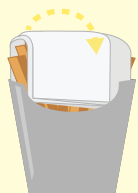

Step 2

Leave enough material to fold napkin over the top of the fries.

Step 3

Insert fries and fold napkin over the top.

Step 4

Place fry sleeve upright on top of any burgers or sandwiches in the bag. Roll and seal the bag top for secure travel.

Clamshell

Clamshells are another popular to-go container that you might already be using. Keep guests safe and fries crispy with this simple packing technique.

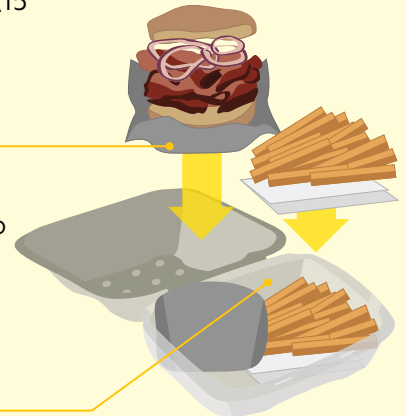

Step 1

Use a knife to carefully cut three holes (not slits) in the top and in each of the sides (15 total).

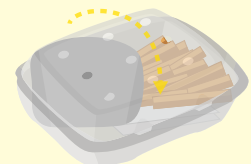

Step 2

Wrap burger or sandwich in foil to retain its heat.

Step 3

Place food in the container with a napkin under fries to help absorb moisture.

Step 4

Close lid to retain heat and place clamshell in bag. Roll and seal the bag top for secure travel.

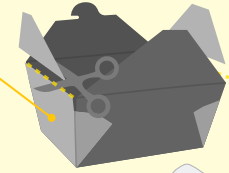

Folded Carton

If your restaurant is already using folded paper cartons, utilise this packaging strategy to maximize safety and heat retention.

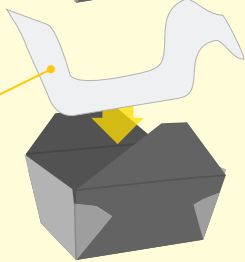

Step 1

Remove the two side flaps to allow the carton to vent.

Step 2

Insert a napkin inside the carton to absorb moisture before inserting food.

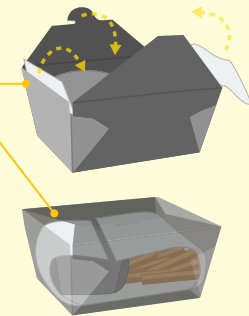

Step 3

Wrap burger or sandwich in foil to retain its heat. Place food in the carton.

Step 4

Fold napkin ends over the top of the food and close the remaining flaps.

Step 5

Place in bag with additional napkins to further absorb moisture. Roll and seal the bag top for secure travel.

For even better performance, package fries separately.

McCain Shoestring Fries

We're For Local

LARGEST PROCESSOR OF POTATOES

McCain is the largest purchaser of potatoes for processing in Australia and we pride ourselves on our strong relationship with Australian Agriculture.

GENERATION TO GENERATION

Proudly forging relationships with growers lasting over generations, some well over 30 years, we are committed to supporting farmers and growers in Australia today and into the future.

125 GROWERS

Celebrating the quality ingredients produced locally, we work with over 120 growers across Australia to bring fresh and superior quality produce to food operators.

On mainland Australia, we work with approximately 40 growers spread across VIC, NSW and SA.

We work with over 85 growers in Tasmania, from Smithton to the north east and down to the central areas.
